His MAJESTY's moſt gracious SPEECH to both Houſes of Parliament, on Thurſday the 15th Day of November, 1753.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

I HAVE called you together as early as your attendance upon your private affairs would admit; and I am confident, that you are all met with the beſt diſpoſitions, to give ſuch application and diſpatch to the buſineſs of this ſeſſion, as may be moſt conducive to the public utility. The events of this Year have not made it neceſſary for me to offer any thing in particular to your conſideration, relating to foreign affairs; and the general ſtate of Europe, remain upon the ſame foot as when we laſt parted; and you may be aſſured of my ſteadineſs, in purſuing the moſt effectual meaſures to preſerve to my people the bleſſings of peace.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I have nothing to aſk of you, but the neceſſary ſupplies for the ordinary ſervices of the enſuing year; and ſuch as have already been under your conſideration. I have ordered eſtimates to be laid before you; and from the experience I have had of your conſtant regard for my honour, and the ſecurity, as well as eaſe, of your fellow ſubjects, I entertain no doubt of your making the proper proviſions for theſe purpoſes.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

I am ſorry to be obliged again to mention to you a ſubject, which reflects diſhonour upon [illegible] beſt endeavours. And let me earneſtly recommend it to you, to continue your ſerious attention to this important object. Whatſoever ſhall be found expedient, either in this, or any other reſpect, for the welfare and happineſs of my people, ſhall meet with my hearty concurrence and ſupport.

The Humble ADDRESS of the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, on the 15th of Nov. 1753.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the lords ſpiritual and temporal in parliament aſſembled, beg leave to return your majeſty our humble thanks for your moſt gracious ſpeech from the throne.

Every opportunity of approaching your ſacred perſon furniſhes us with new matter, for acknowledging your majeſty's conſtant and unwearied attention to the welfare of your kingdom; which is in no inſtance more conſpicuous, than in your vigilance to preſerve to them the bleſſings of peace. Our juſt confidence in your majeſty's purſuing the moſt effectual meaſures for this purpoſe, is equal to thoſe grateful ſentiments with which our hearts are filled on this occaſion. The honour and ſecurity of the nation, both at home and abroad, the maintenance of our religion and liberty, the protection and extenſion of our commerce, and every branch of the national happineſs, are the objects of your royal care, wiſely and ſteadily exerted for the common good of your people.

It gives us the utmoſt concern, that it ſhould be neceſſary for your majeſty again to take notice of the increaſe of thoſe horrid crimes of robbery and murder, which are arrived at ſo great a height. We are duly ſenſible, that your majeſty's juſtice is never wanting to protect the innocent, and puniſh the guilty; and it ſhall be our conſtant endeavour to inforce, and add vigour to, the laws for bringing ſuch audacious and obſtinate offenders to puniſhment. Your majeſty, like a true father to your people, has often graciouſly recommended to us the ſalutary work of reformation; which, though it proceeds too ſlowly, we will not fail to promote to the utmoſt of our power.

Nothing ſhall be wanting on our part, to anſwer your majeſty's juſt expectations, that the public utility ſhall be our rule in carrying on the buſineſs of this ſeſſion. And we humbly entreat your majeſty to accept our ſtrongeſt aſſurances, that as the continuance of your precious life is the ſubject of our ardent wiſhes and prayers; ſo the ſupport of your government, the glory of your auſpicious reign, and the preſervation of the proteſtant ſucceſſion in your royal family, are, and ſhall be, the invariable principles and aim of our conduct.

His MAJESTY's moſt Gracious ANSWER.

NOTHING can be more agreeable to me, than this very dutiful and affectionate addreſs. I thank you for it: And, as my great aim is your laſting proſperity, be aſſured, that the confidence you repoſe in me, ſhall be made uſe of for the honour and true intereſt of the nation.

The Humble ADDRESS of the Houſe of Commons to the King, on the 15th of Nov. 1753.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the commons of Great-Britain in parliament aſſembled, beg leave to return your majeſty our humble thanks, for your moſt gracious ſpeech from the throne.

And we aſſure your majeſty, that we will [illegible] people; and we have the utmoſt confidence in your majeſty's wiſdom and ſteadineſs, that you will purſue the moſt effectual meaſures for preſerving to this nation the ineſtimable bleſſings of peace.

We beg leave to aſſure your majeſty, that we will chearfully raiſe ſuch ſupplies, as ſhall be found neceſſary for the ſervices of the enſuing year.

Nothing can be more pleaſing to your faithful commons, than to receive freſh marks of your majeſty's gracious approbation of our paſt zeal and regard for your honour, as well as for the ſecurity and eaſe of our fellow ſubjects.

We lament, with the deepeſt concern, that the methods hitherto attempted to repreſs and prevent the horrid crimes of robbery and murder, ſo grievous, as well as diſhonourable, to this nation, have proved ineffectual; but we aſſure your majeſty, that however difficult the taſk may be, to reform, or even reſtrain, the deſperate and the abandoned, we will nevertheleſs perſevere in our ſerious endeavours to provide, if it be poſſible, a more adequate remedy againſt ſuch enormities, being fully perſuaded, from an uninterrupted experience of your majeſty's goodneſs, that we ſhall be aſſiſted by your majeſty's concurrence and ſupport in every meaſure, that ſhall be found expedient, in this or any other reſpect, for the welfare and happineſs of your people.

The HUMOURIST. No. V.

Reddere perſonæ ſcit Convenientia cuique.
HORACE.

SIR William Temple ſomewhere ſays, that he knew a Stateſman, that had rather have ſaid a ſmart Thing than done a wiſe one, and whole Bent of Inclination rather prompted him to ſet the Company in a Horſe-Laugh, than the Nation rejoice.

I believe nothing is more common, than an Affectation of this kind; the World abounds with Men of this Stamp, [illegible] to [illegible] Mirth, as well at the Expence of particular Objects, as their own Abilities.

In the ſmall Concerns of Life wherein I have been engaged I always found that a certain Degree of Gravity was the ſureſt Step towards diſtinguiſhing Eminence of Station. I hate Moroſeneſs, yet I deteſt Levity; I ſcorn an awful unbended Diſtance, as much as Wantonneſs; but it is eſſentially requiſite, that a proper Diſtinction be made between theſe ſeveral Qualities, otherwiſe Reverence ſinks into Freedom, and Awe becomes Contempt.

Our Actions ought to be ſuited to the Nature of our Profeſſion, and be ſo tempered, as that Mankind may have it in their Power to ſay, that we diſcover Courteſy at the ſame Time that we preſerve Reſpect.

We are apt to ſtart at the mere Idea of a merry Judge, or a waggiſh Divine, at a facetious Stateſman, or a humorous King; the Characters no way anſwer to the Nature of Gravity, they are inconſiſtent, and it is impoſſible to excel in any Part where Ridicule comes unſeaſonably.

How weak that Mortal ſeems, who aims at diſtinguiſhing himſelf from the Brute Creation, by the unruly Exerciſe of his riſible Faculties, and not by Reaſon! More bright Men have fallen Victims to a Miſapplication of their Talents than to the Sword: One of this volatile Turn of Mind labours under a Variety of Diſadvantages; if he proves ſucceſsful in the Pointings of his Repartee, he gains as his Reward Envy, and if unhappy in the marſhalling of his Wit, Ridicule; at all Events the World ſoon diſcovers his weak Side, and this habitual Free- [illegible] Man's Door whoſe Buſineſs it is to [illegible] on him.

It is not enough for a Man to have good Qualities, unleſs he knows the right Oeconomy of them. We may be endowed with Excellences ſuperior to the reſt of our Fellow Creatures, but it is not ſufficient to know that we poſſeſs them, Reaſon informs us, we ſhould uſe them: Levity of Carriage and a Diſtortion of Body and Countenance upon the leaſt Occaſion of a Jeſt, a Jeſt too dependant upon the Rack of Genius to diſcover the moſt diſtant Approach towards Wit, argues ſuch a Profuſeneſs of Spirits and Miſapplication of Capacity, that the general Voice of Mankind muſt exclaim againſt it.

It is a good Piece of Marſhal Policy, always to keep a Body of Reſerve, and to be ſo prepared for the worſt Emergency, as to have it in our Power to draw for ſuccour when Neceſſity requires it. The ſame Rule ought to be cloſely obſerved by every Individual; give a Pledge of your [illegible], but mortgage not the whole, leſt the Mortgagee, taking an unfair Advantage, ſhould put you under the Neceſſity of applying to Equity for Redreſs.

It is a Matter of the utmoſt Prudence to pleaſe without Buffoonery: It is the [illegible] part of Fineſſe, not to give Occaſion to any one for his laughing at me, when my Endeavours are that he ſhould laugh at my Jeſt. Many a Man paſſes in the Crowd of Life for a Philoſopher, becauſe he looks one; a Dignity of Carriage demands Reſpect, and if it have not the Power of beſtowing, at leaſt it makes the World believe we have, Senſe.

The Paradox of the wiſe Man of Antiquity, that the half is better than the whole, has, by this Application, that one half of our Abilities properly huſbanded, and the other half diſcovered, is of more real Importance, than the whole profuſely [illegible].

A [illegible] of [illegible] is not amiſs upon ſome Occaſions; where it is call'd in to enliven Converſation, or when ſo uſed as neither to diſcompoſe the Mind of the Hearer or injure the Speaker; where it neither derogates from [illegible] or infringes on the Laws of Decency; for nothing [illegible] is Ill-Nature, and [illegible] uſed as a Moral is an Argument of Weakneſs.

THE glorious ſtand which is made by the parliament of Paris in favour of liberty of conſcience, cannot fail to be applauded by every true Briton, who feels the enjoyment of that invaluable bleſſing. The worthy patriots who compoſe that auguſt body conſider the ſervice of their country as a real duty. They oppoſe the vile attempts that have been made to enſnare the conſciences of the people, with a genius and ſpirit able to cope with the combined force of regal ambition, prieſtly cunning and miniſterial influence.

That our readers may judge of the importance of this ſtruggle, we preſent them with the following hiſtorical account of that famous Bull or conſtitution of the Pope, called Unigenitus, which is but little underſtood, altho' it is the ſource of all the diſputes which have lately ariſen between the clergy and parliament of France.

The deſign of the Pope's Bull, publiſhed in the year 1713, was to condemn a great number of propoſitions contained in a book, publiſhed by father Queſnell, intitled, 'the new teſtament, with moral reflections upon every 'verſe, &c. or, an abridgment of the morality 'of the goſpel, the acts of the apoſtles, the 'epiſtles of St. Paul, the canonical epiſtles, 'and the revelations.' Out of this book of father Queſnell's, the Pope culled 101 propoſitions, and paſſed that ſevere ſentence upon them which ſhall preſently be mentioned. Moſt of theſe propoſitions expreſs the common ſentiment of thoſe called Janſeniſts, relating to the efficacy of divine grace, ſome to the invalidity of unjuſt excommunications, and one to the practice of making oaths ſo common in the church. I ſhall only take notice of thoſe propoſitions that relate to the reading of the holy ſcriptures, which the Pope, in this Bull, has thought fit to condemn.

Prop. 79. 'Tis profitable and neceſſary in 'all times, in all places, and for all ſorts of 'perſons, to ſtudy and know the ſpirit, piety, 'and myſteries of the holy ſcriptures.'

Prop. 80. 'The reading of the holy ſcriptures is for all.'

[illegible] of the word [illegible] for the laity to diſpenſe with the obligation of reading it.'

Prop. [illegible]. 'The Lord's day muſt be ſanctified by chriſtians with the reading of pious 'books, and above all of the holy ſcriptures. 'It is miſchievous to think of withdrawing a 'chriſtian from reading thereof.'

Prop. [illegible]. 'It is an illuſion to perſuade one's 'ſelf, that the knowledge of the myſteries of 'religion muſt not be imparted to women by 'reading of the ſacred books. The abuſes of 'ſcripture and hereſies are not ſprung from the 'ſimplicity of women, but from the proud 'knowledge of men.'

Prop. [illegible]. 'To ſnatch the new teſtament 'out of the hands of chriſtians, or to keep it 'ſhut to them, by depriving them of the means 'of underſtanding it, is to ſhut unto them the 'mouth of Chriſt.'

Prop. [illegible]. 'To forbid chriſtians the reading 'of the holy ſcriptures, eſpecially of the goſpel, 'is to forbid the uſe of light to the children of 'light, and to make them ſuffer a ſort of excommunication.'

Theſe propoſitions, among the reſt, the Pope makes to condemn in the following words: "Wherefore, having heard the judgment of the cardinals, and other divines aforeſaid, which they delivered to us both in word and writing, and having implored the aſſiſtance of divine light, by appointing private and alſo public prayers for that end, we do, by this our [illegible] conſtitution, declare, condemn and reject reſpectively, all and every one of the propoſitions aforeſaid, as falſe, captious, ſounding ill, and offenſive to pious ears, ſcandalous, pernicious, raſh, injurious to the church and her practice, contumelious not only to the church, but to the ſtate, ſeditious, wicked, blaſphemous, [illegible] hereſy, and alſo [illegible] [illegible]

"And by this conſtitution he commands the faithful [illegible] that they preſume not to hold, teach, or preach, otherwiſe concerning [illegible] propoſitions [illegible] is contained in this conſtitution [illegible] whoſoever ſhall teach, defend, or publiſh them, or any of 'em jointly or ſeverally, or ſhall treat of them by way of diſpute, public or private, unleſs to impugn them, ſhall, ipſo facto, without any other declaration, incur the church cenſures, and be obnoxious to other penalties appointed by law againſt ſuch delinquents. He further forbids the printing of the ſaid book of father Queſnell, and forbids every one of the faithful the reading, tranſcribing, keeping or uſing it under the pain of excommunication to be incurred, ipſo facto. "He requires his venerable brethren, patriarchs, archbiſhops, biſhops, and other ordinaries, and alſo the inquiſitors of hereſy, that by all means they reſtrain and reduce whoſoever ſhall contradict or rebel againſt the conſtitution, by the penalties and cenſures aforeſaid, and the other remedies of law and fact, even by calling in, if need be, the ſecular power."

This remarkable bull concludes thus, "Let no one, then infringe or audaciouſly oppoſe this our declaration, condemnation, prohibition and interdict; and if any one preſume to attempt this, let him know, he ſhall incur the indignation of almighty God, and that of his bleſſed apoſtles, Peter and Paul. Given at Rome at St. Mary Major's, in the Year of our Lord 1713, the 6th of the Ides of September, and in the 13th Year of our Pontificate."

By the terrible roaring of this bull the Pope thought to ſilence the doctrines of father Queſnell, but great numbers of the French nation have embraced them: The clergy therefore make uſe of this bull as a ſort of teſt to diſcover ſuch hereticks, and if they do not ſubſcribe to it, the ſacraments, and other rights of the church are refuſed them.

CHARLES-TOWN, January 29.

On Thurſday laſt died, at Dorcheſter, truly regretted by all that knew him, Doct. FREDERICK HOLZENDORFF; a Man, whoſe Diligence and Care in his Vocation, as well as amiable Diſpoſition, Behaviour and Character, had gain'd him the Eſteem of every Individual: On Friday Evening he was decently interred, after the Manner of the Free Maſons, many of whom attended the Funeral in Proceſſion, during which Minute Guns were fired.
